discrimination of novel anti-PII amoebapore antibodies. Bacterial amoebae are widely used in research as a model system for amoebic protozoa. In this study we used two models, Dictyostelium discoideum and Entamoeba histolytica, to develop new fully automatized assays to identify and distinguish between antibodies to the PII (phosphate transport) amoebapore of D. discoideum. We found a distinct and diverse pattern of antibodies to PII amoebapore in human sera, with a positive correlation with protection against the amoebic infection caused by Entamoeba histolytica in a recent field trial. The assays described here have the potential to be used for the rapid identification of vaccine candidates against amoebiasis.10/22/08 The Rooster at Night It's hard to explain to anyone what it was like for me the day I met Simon. Simon, the postman. The man who would become a lifelong friend.
A man who would introduce me to an amazing place in Los Angeles I'd never have known about otherwise. The man whose camera has photographed my life in ways that have brought me such joy and laughter. In fact, I'll have a hard time explaining to anyone what it was like. I love saying I met the postman the day I met the postman. It sounds like such a simple thing, but it's not. Some days it feels like it happened when I was just a little girl, playing in my bedroom. Other days it feels like it happened just yesterday. I met Simon when I was a girl, maybe 6 or 7. I had always been around people. My grandfather was a pretty big deal. When I say big deal, I don't mean he was a priest or a professor or some kind of authority figure, though he was that too. He was big. He was 2d92ce491b
