When I do this the menu button does not fire so I searched and found that I need to do the following inside my activity class: @Override public boolean onCreateOptionsMenu(Menu menu) { MenuInflater inflater = getMenuInflater(); inflater.inflate(R.menu.menu, menu); return true; } and this does work, the problem is the close button is in my toolbar and I would like to remove this menubutton and put a "home" button. How could I implement my menu to be in the toolbar? A: There are 3 approaches to take here. Implement a custom toolbar that just contains the toolbar items you desire. In that case, you simply need to call setSupportActionBar(toolbar) in onCreate. Implement a custom activity theme that ignores the menu items you don't want. The sample code for that is here. Make your toolbar into a custom view, and remove the toolbar items you don't want from there. To do this, simply set up the view (in onCreate) and in onCreateOptionsMenu, remove the items you don't want. Note that you won't be able to attach a click listener to a view (unless it's a subclass of some ancestor that does), so you will need to use some other listener to execute the close action. Computer programs, such as games and other media, are often released in different versions. The different versions of
